

Stone Zoo Review
By Barbara Fritz-Elliott

Have you ever seen this animal? I had not until I visited the Stone Zoo in Stoneham. This is a Zebu. The Zebu can live up to 20 years and weigh anywhere from 300 to 600 pounds. This animal is a domestic breed of cattle originating in South Asia. They are well adapted to withstand high temperatures and are farmed throughout the tropics. They are used as drought oxen, dairy cattle, and as beef cattle, as well as for byproducts such as hides and dung for fuel and manure.

If big cats are more to your liking be sure to visit the majestic, but endangered Jaguar.

Around every curve and bend you will surely discover unusual as well common animals.

Get a LIBRARY PASS for the Stone Zoo to enjoy a reduced entrance fee for this Massachusetts treasure.